Mushroom Foraging Basics

NEW Autumn is peak mushroom season. This class is your opportunity to learn the basics of wild edible mushroom identification. We will discuss techniques to identify fall wild mushrooms and the habitat where they grow. Our focus will be on safety and on choice edible species. Poisonous mushrooms will also be discussed. After our Friday classroom time, we will head to the woods on Saturday. On our field trip we will identify everything that is found and document each species to be included in the state records of species. This is a great opportunity for citizen scientists. Class size will be limited due to the outdoor aspect of foraging.
